Organization of The Dictionary

1. Headword

1.1 Variant spellings are given before the definition (e.g. cabby n. (also cabbi e)); in all such cases the form given as the headword is the preferred form. When the variant form is alphabetically remote from the main form it is given at its proper place in the dictionary (e.g. caiman var. of *cayman).

1.2 Words that are different but spelt the same way (homographs) are distinguished by superior figures (e.g. bat1 and bat2).

1.3 Words that are normally spelt with a capital initial are given in this form as the headword; when they are in some senses spelt with a small initial and in others with a capital initial this is indicated by repetition of the full word in the appropriate form within the entry (as at carboniferous).

1.4 Variant American spellings are indicated by the designation US (e.g. favour à US favor). If you enter the American spelling in the keyword edit box, you have direct access to the corresponding entry for the British variant.
